LEGISLATIVE REUNION

County Members of Last Legislature Make Merry at Willoughby. Speaker Weeks Present. Prominent Men of Vicinity Speakers.

The Orleans County lawmakers of the 1915 state legislature, with invited guests assembled at Pisgah Lodge at one o'clock Thursday, Sept. 9th for their first annual outing. That there was a great deal of interest taken, is manifest when it is noted that 16 out of a total of 18 members, responded to the call and were present.

Pisgah Lodge, which by the way is under the able management of County Senator Seaver's son and daughter, did itself more than proud and its attractive menu, printed on birch bark, proved in reality to be a solace to the warm weather and a fitting tribute to inner man.

While the outing was given by the county representatives of the 1915 legislature, they extended their hospitality to the two county senators, H. T. Seaver of Barton and Sumner C. Wilcox of Morgan besides inviting as their special guests Judge W. W. Miles of Barton, Horace F. Graham of Craftsbury, F. C. Williams of Newport, Myron A. Adams of Derby, Merl B. Howard of Greensboro, Donald B. Keith of Derby, Harry A. Black of Newport and Rev. Marcellus W. Farman of Westfield. And as a special guest of honor John

She said "big business," the physicians and boards of health, were instruments working for prohibition today, but when the national convention of the Y. P. S. C. E. a few years ago adopted the slogan, "a saloonless nation in 1920" it seemed an impossibility.

Miss Gordon said the Webb-Kenyon bill was a help in prohibitory territory and that the co-operation of the various temperance forces was feared by the liquor forces who have been so strongly organized. She referred to recent prohibitory victories in the large territories in Canada, pointed to the temperance action of nations in Europe, and said one-half of the people of the United States were now living in "dry" territory while about two thirds of the territory is without the legalized saloon.

"Our opponents say that prohibition does not prohibit," said Miss Gordon. "Neither does license regulate." As for the personal liberty plea of the supporters of the liquor traffic, Miss Gordon said, "personal liberty leaves off where public good begins." As for revenue received from the licenses she answered by pointing to the states under prohibition as financially the equal of license states and referred to the astounding savings in Russia with the revenue from the sale of vodka cut off.

The need of the woman's vote to make and enforce prohibition laws was urged but the question in Vermont rested with the stay-at-home men. "Get out the vote," said Miss Gordon. She professed her belief that Vermont would redeem herself next March and would be the 20th prohibition state, South Carolina voting on the question September 14. She predicted victory there.

A collection followed and C. B. Webster sang a bass solo. Franklin Pierce of Chicago favored the audience with
